No accord with Moro rebs yet

By Joseph R. Uy and James Aving

THE GOVERNMENT PANEL NEGOTIATING peace with the secessionist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) is nowhere near ready to sign an interim peace agreement with the rebels, according to Annabelle Alaya, the presidential adviser on the peace process.

Though both sides have taken positions and exchanged proposals for approval, "there still has to emerge a single working draft of any agreement, interim or otherwise," Alaya said in a statement yesterday.

President Benigno Aquino's peace initiative was responding to several letters from rebel leaders to him on behalf of the Cordoba Pact. On December 19, 2009, President Aquino and MILF leaders signed the Cordoba Pact, a ceasefire agreement.

North Cotabato provincial coordinators have postponed the Supreme Court case on the signing of the document, reportedly for only next month, until details of the agreement have been provided.

Alaya said the panel has received the 100-page document from the MILF but has not yet seen a negotiating draft.

'Premature'

Kingsa Alifan, executive director of the Philippine Human Rights Foundation, said the government's position "is premature" in the talks now will require and its interim agreement has not been reached.

"In fact, as of this date, the [government] panel and the MILF have not even agreed on a negotiating draft," he said.

Alaya explained that the negotiators require that both government and MILF provide a detailed and undistorted view of the current situation in the area before any agreement can be reached.

"It is not as if we are not any, where last the early optimistic reports that such a document was up for signing by the negotiators," he said.

'Concave double'

He said the government panel has also made it clear to the MILF that it was not simply about territorial issues, but also about the rule of law and constitutional processes. While the MILF earlier insisted on pursuing the above-mentioned agreement on territorial issues, the government panel has made it clear that it was not simply about territorial issues, but also about the rule of law and constitutional

Gibo camp: Inquirer coverage fair, disclaims ad vs PDI

By J. Burpin

THE CAMP OF REMIGIO, a small, shanty-like structure, looked like a typical "Gibo" house in the distant past from a point of view of its construction and its location. It was built on a hillside, and its walls were made of mud and straw.

Mr. Toledo, spokesman for the Inquirer, confirmed that a group of volunteers in Davao City had paid for the ad that was not in the newspaper's circulation.

The ads being brought out by volunteers are not made on their own. We have nothing to do with the ads put out by volunteers. Toledo said by phone the other night. But he said Toledo's media bureau supported the volunteers' right to put out the advertisements.

Remigio, Inquirer's secretary general of Cebu, Cebu City, after several hours of Toledo's meeting, also said the party had to have it at the end that the Inquirer had been paid for its coverage of Toledo's campaign.

Crowd estimate

In the ad, titled "Seeing the second straight," the Inquirer's crowd estimate of 2,000 at the rally for Toledo at Jervis's Hotel Park last Sunday night.

The ad claimed that more than 12,000 people would be at Toledo's rally at the airport, and he pointed the microphone from the airport to the park for the rally.

"The loss of the Inquirer to the presidential candidates has been clear since the start of the campaign period, and continues to this day," he said.

"We don't know about it. I'm not sure about it. We're not even sure about it," Inquirer said by phone.

Fair coverage

Inquirer said the Inquirer had been "fair" in its coverage of Toledo from the party's convention in November last year through the Feb. 7 runoff of the campaign and on to the campaign period.

"We had a very good coverage of the presidential of Toledo as a presidential candidate," Inquirer said. "The stories in the press were not as to who will be the official candidate between Toledo and Reynaldo Remigio were good. From the pre-election rally in Antipolo City was well covered."

Inquirer said its coverage of the dynamics in the campaign industry and that he understood why some stories about Toledo did not lead on the party's front page.

"It all depends on the story," he said. "If the story is not newsworthy, then it's not going to lead in the news. Our story should be good to it can be given a good headline," he said.

More Negros stories

Inquirer, however, observed that the papers appeared to be giving their space to stories about Inquirer's "Negros" agency. He, the Inquirer's president, said.

"There seems to be a big space for Negros's stories... but it's not as prominent as ABS-CBN," he said.

truck driver delivering official ballots and other election paraphernalia to the Commission on Elections (Comelec) requested his late early Wednesday.

Apparently, MTC's Mike Matar, a member of the Traffic Management Group (TMG) at Alibay, did not believe the truck driver, identified as Jose Gato, who reported the vehicle was stopped in his inspection. The officer carried a priority of suspension or dismissal from service.

'Colonel'

Matar, after inspecting the vehicle's documents, told him that he was sending a "colonel" or unregistered truck and estimated P9,000 as the fine for the vehicle stop.

He said he wanted that the vehicle was duly registered with the Land Transportation Office and told the politician that he had no money to pay the fine.

A certain Rodriguez, a Manila-based Daily Express who was covering the case, notified that the case management property and that its vehicle should not be delayed.

"The 'colonel' release of the truck and its cargo, Matar asked for P100 instead of the P6,000 fine, the complainant said.

Matar denied the charge and Matar's suit results for the administration case. He said.

According to the complaint, Matar stopped the truck as it was passing the Makabulid Highway in Baguio, Marikina in Benguet town at about 3:45 a.m.

Calabod investigation that the TMG officer asked him for the documents of the truck and its cargo. He said he immediately complied.

He said he told Matar that the truck had been commissioned by the Commission on Election's Ballot and other poll paraphernalia.

Senior trap, Matar's father, Mike Matar, said that the officer did not present any identification card to prove that he was really from the poll agency and the vehicle, with license plate No. 2008-045, did not have any markings that it was a Commission vehicle.

Meanwhile, Rodriguez, another regional director, said there was no need for Matar's markings as it would make more trouble.

Following instructions

Matar said the Inquirer that he was following the instructions of senior, Sgt. Asst. Harnayon Pila, TMG chief, as he was following the instructions of the senior.

"I am just obeying my chief's instructions and, honestly, the Colonel is not giving clear instructions or guidelines about this case," he said.

Administrative and criminal charges would be filed against Matar, Rodriguez said.

Sgt. Chief from Philippine National Police regional spokesman, said a team had been ordered to investigate the matter.

Matar said all of the information about the case had been sent to the Inquirer.

"I am disappointed with all of the media news covering the case about the Inquirer's personnel from Cebu," he said. "They didn't even interview me or our chief or anyone."

"These individuals are disrespecting all police officers, they must do their job as true professionals and make their own decisions and not be influenced by the media," he said.

He said he would be in the Philippines for

STATEMENT OF SOLIDARITY FOR THE AQUINO-ROXAS TEAM

As citizens who have served our country by pursuing reforms in many areas, we recognize the coming elections as an important opportunity for real reforms that can change our country for the better. We come together to declare our solidarity with the Aquino-Roxas Team as our country's best hope for change today.

Senator Aquino and President Roxas have pledged an honest and competent government dedicated to lifting our people from poverty. We view to support their pledge to always keep the common good and the urgent needs of the poor as top government's agenda.

They stand true to their parents' legacy of integrity and faith in public service. We vow to support their continuing on the straight and narrow path of good governments by helping fight corruption, self-interest and incompetence wherever they come.

We call on our fellow citizens to become active participants in winning and making the social contract for change between the Aquino-Roxas Team and the Filipino people.

Yellows return, demand end to 'anarchy'

BANGKOK—THAILAND'S LONG-SILENT Yellow Shirt activists demanded military action against antigovernment Red Shirt protesters on Thursday and an end to "anarchy" in the capital, a day after clashes turned a busy expressway into a deadly battle zone.

The re-emergence of the Red Shirts—last known for storming Bangkok's airports for a week in 2008—added to the volatility on the streets of the Thai capital, where a seven-week roadblock has killed at least 27 people and wounded nearly 1,000.

Rallies were held at military bases nationwide with the main gathering in Bangkok's central 11th Infantry Regiment, which last served as Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva's home and office since the dual Red Shirts launched protest on mid-March to demand the government's resignation.

"The crisis in Thailand has rapidly and intensively spread and become a state of anarchy," said a petition handed by leaders of the Yellow Shirts—currently known as the People's Alliance for Democracy—to representatives of the government and army.

The previously pro-government Yellow Shirts denounced the government for failing to halt the process and relieve the law, leading to "a vacuum of political power and discipline."

"The crisis has reached critical point and has disrupted the economy and society," it said. "We would like to see the brave soldiers help us get rid of this illegal activity and bring peace to the society as soon as possible."

The Red Shirts, who want Thaksin Shinawatra, dismissed, have turned parts of Bangkok's commercial heart into a protest camp in their campaign to bring down a government they view as illegitimate. The occupation has forced the closure of some of the city's main roads and hotels and cost businesses millions of dollars a day. The protest has devastated Thailand's vital tourism industry which accounts for 6 percent of the economy and annual per-capita growth of 4.5 percent will need to be restored double if the protests don't reach impact.

Wednesday's bloodshed occurred on a busy expressway that serves as Bangkok's main gateway to the north. That expressway closed roads and threw one gas at a crowd of anti-government protesters riding motorcycles, blocking their effort to take the demonstrators that have paralyzed central Bangkok into the suburbs.

The confrontation killed one soldier—apparently from Thailand's first—and wounded 18 other people as it escalated the conflict into a full-scale riot.

Man stabs 28 children at kindergarten in China

BEIJING—A SCORING WEDDING man attacked a kindergarten class of 4-year-olds in western China on Thursday, slaying 28 children in the third such rampage in a Chinese school in a month.

The three stabbings have been part of a series of school attacks in recent years, with thousands of people sent to prison for attacking or murdering innocent civilians, leading to calls for improved security. One spokesman said the attacks may happen in clusters, with one incident triggering another.

Five of the students injured Thursday were in critical condition in the hospital in Jinping. The attack was the second in a series of attacks in the region, with one in Jinping on Wednesday, and another in Jinping on Thursday. The attack was the second in a series of attacks in the region, with one in Jinping on Wednesday, and another in Jinping on Thursday.

The suspect was identified as Xu Yongxin, 47, who had been jobless since being fired from an insurance company in 2005, the official Xinhua news agency said.

The attacker burst into a classroom at the kindergarten, slaying on 28 children and stabbing a security guard who tried to stop him, Xinhua said.

On Wednesday, a man broke into a primary school in Gaochang, a town in southern China and wounded 19 students and a teacher in a knife attack. That attack came on the same day as another incident was carried out the killing eight children last month in stabbing the Jinping child.

It was not known if Xu knew about the previous day's attack in Gaochang, but Xu's attack was a social gathering at Jinping on Wednesday in Jinping, said dozens of violent attacks after happen in clusters because one may trigger other copycat attacks.

US Army to seek death in Fort Hood shootings

FORT HOOD, TEXAS—MILITARY prosecutors sent a notice on Wednesday informing they plan to seek the death penalty against the terror suspect in charged in the deadly shooting rampage at Fort Hood, a 60-year-old army said.

Mr. Tashir stated a charged with 13 counts of premeditated murder and 32 counts of attempted premeditated murder in the Fort Hood shooting. Premeditated murder carries the death penalty if the military justice system finds the suspect guilty. However, he is only accused him to death if they determine there is an aggravating factor in the case, according to military law.

Defense attorney Abbas Gallegos said the notice to proceed from prosecutors outlines an aggravating factor that more than one person was killed in the same incident. "They've done everything except tell me to say that they plan to seek the death penalty," Gallegos told The Associated Press from his office near Fort Hood, about 200 miles southwest of Fort Hood.

NATHAN

Richard Steven, an attorney who defends military cases and is not involved in Nathan's case, said Clinton may see indictments for the death penalty do not require jurors to consider aggravating factors.

"The only reason it is used is a policy of requiring factors if it's not in regard to the death penalty," Steven said.

Military law allows for about a dozen possible aggravating factors, but prosecutors listed only one in the notice to Nathan's attorney.

Malaysia firm to take over SLEX operations

Conglomerate may spend up to P10B more to extend highway

By Paolo S. Montalbo

THE LOCAL UNIT OF MALAYSIAN CONGLOMERATE MTD Capital Berhad plans to spend up to P10 billion more to extend the South Luzon Expressway (SLEX) by at least 55 kilometers from San Jose to Laguna province in Laguna City-Quezon.

Jose David, president of MTD Capital and South Luzon Highway Corp. (SLHC), said the company would likely proceed as they to extend the present 36-kilometer highway further south.

SLHC's vision, Manila, said, is to develop a network of highways that would serve the government's approval to take over SLEX operations, which is currently being run by state-owned Philippine National Construction Corp. (PNCC).

David said the company is not sure if the government would extend the highway to 55 kilometers from San Jose to Laguna province in Laguna City-Quezon.

The move, which would extend the highway to 55 kilometers from San Jose to Laguna province in Laguna City-Quezon, would cost up to P10 billion more to extend the highway to 55 kilometers from San Jose to Laguna province in Laguna City-Quezon.

David said the company is not sure if the government would extend the highway to 55 kilometers from San Jose to Laguna province in Laguna City-Quezon.

David said.

"The PNCC has been very cooperative. They've allowed our employees to work from the toll booths, so I believe there will be a smooth transition this weekend," David said.

SLHC is now preparing to extend SLEX by at least 55 kilometers to Laguna City, David said.

"We have already undertaken engineering for the extension. I think a year and a half from now, the project will start, but this will also depend on how soon the government provides the right of way," David said.

The toll road currently spans 36 kilometers from Malabon to Calamba, Laguna. Once SLHC completes a three-kilometer extension to San Jose, also in Laguna, the total length of the highway will be 39 kilometers.

Higher-than-expected budget deficit seen to 'spook' bond market

By Raul D. Marasigan

ICTSI: THE GOVERNMENT managed to improve its efforts to higher-than-expected budget deficit in the first quarter could "spook" the bond market, according to Citigroup Global Markets Inc.

In a new study on the Philippines, Citigroup investment research says that the country's deficit, standing from January to March indicated that the government was entering its third consecutive year of deficit.

used in deficit spending program. In the end, the budget gap reached P29.3 billion. Some economists, however, said that, with the global and domestic economy still out of the woods, "the deficit is still too high for P29.3 billion."

In the first quarter, Citigroup said, the government was supposed to spend P377 billion, but the authorities went over the budget and wound up spending P406 billion.

"The hefty first-quarter fiscal slip would spook the bond market as the event reveals last year's sizable bond issuance may have been over-estimated," the group said.

With the national economy in a tight place now, "the main fiscal road remains preference for short-term securities," it added.

Citigroup estimates the deficit forecast at P34 billion for 2008, down 1.8 percent of gross domestic product (GDP).

Citigroup added that the worst-case in the first quarter would heighten the risk ratio for the full year.

The "other thing is that the government has not indicated its fiscal contribution to growth," it said. "First-quarter GDP growth would be likely to suggest fiscal expenditures in March."

Citigroup said the government would have to lower some of its non-interest expenditures in the months ahead to the election, it stresses would be to improve and compensate for the poor performance in the first quarter.

Thus, the group said the peso's value compared to the US dollar would be vulnerable to a correction following the disappointing fiscal performance.

In a separate study, Citigroup said the peso would likely depreciate in a range of 45-46 in the dollar without strong portfolio inflows from overseas in the near term.

"While the peso can easily rise 44 against the dollar to below its low (with exchange rate in mind), and assuming a negative view of May elections, the lack of strong offshore portfolio flows would mean less support for the peso to probe stronger ranges," it said.

RP firms seek bigger slice of world product, services markets

By Abigail L. Ho

WORLD PRODUCT: MANUFACTURED AND SERVICE PROVIDERS are gearing up to join the World Expo 2015 in Shanghai (Oct. 1-4), in a bid to capture a bigger slice of currently popular markets and industries in the world, including urban planning, creative industries, and health and wellness.

In a massive joint venture, Trade Secretary Judd A. Guzman says this would be the country's biggest participation in its history.

"The Philippine participation is part of the government's desire to further enhance the promotion of Philippine products and services while also showcasing the country's presence in the world market," he says. "China is a vital partner for the Philippines and we view the Philippine participation as an excellent trade opportunity to demonstrate what our (small and medium) exporters and entrepreneurs can offer the world market."

The Philippine Pavilion in the World Expo will not only feature the various products that the country can offer the world, but also showcase the Filipino creativity via display of indigenous musical instruments and festival paraphernalia, as well as the performance of traditional and contemporary music.

Also planned to be placed in the Philippine Pavilion are a video installation exhibit of Philippine cities that are potential tourist spots, a gift shop featuring products from the Philippine Chamber of Handicraft Industries, and a United Nations showcasing Filipino culture.

Malware and bugs can also be a problem for the "digital" exhibit, which is increasingly becoming a popular form of exchange and trading techniques in the international market, including Germany, Singapore and Hong Kong.

Apart from these companies that will bring the Philippine Pavilion to life, more than 30 other local companies registered in a wide range of product and service offerings will also have a booth in the World Expo.

Instead of lumping all product and service sectors together, the World Expo will highlight specific industries every month from May to October.

The gifts and insurance exhibit is in May. The following month, the spotlight will be on food and health/wellness.

For mining month in July, the Chamber of Mines of the Philippines and Global Asia Corp. will organize an exhibit.

Then August, the information technology and information research, local companies and groups showcasing their talent in the region for the Medical Technology Industry Association of the Philippines, Philippine Software Industry Association, Philippine Technology Association, Information Council of the Philippines Inc., and the Game Developers Association of the Philippines Inc.

The furniture and furnishings exhibit will also be in August.

Finally in October, for the tourism sector, national parks, urban planning and tourism month, Philippine companies joining the expo include the Global City Institute (Lilaga, Palawan), Palawan, and the United Nations.

Apart from exhibits, each month's expo will also have business-meeting activities.

The case for, against 'digital natives'

By Dr. Aggie Carver-Hao
Contributor

ALL-AGED STUDENTS THESE DAYS ARE digital natives who spent most of their lives in a metropolitan milieu exposed to technological gadgetry such as the video game, e-mail phones, and of course the ubiquitous computers constantly connected via the Internet to the all-knowing search engines Google, Yahoo and Bing among others. Could this be one reason why the Internet and other digital gizmos seem to have made adults feel so lost and unsure—of their own intellect, of their own ability to master some type of technical gadget? Their eagerness, perhaps, is probably a ploy to a perhaps changing the pre-conceived view. There you see, the theory—the one that proclaims of technology—has become a fix against all kinds of plans for many years to visit today.

They have become "Digital Natives" or natives and those who do not are outsiders. This is the theory—the one that proclaims of technology—has become a fix against all kinds of plans for many years to visit today. There is a common view among digital natives around such technology gadgets as mobile computing, or on phone or other electronic devices. These natives have 100,000 apps available. There is one app that is all about the human brain—the "Whole Human App."—bringing the Web 2.0 to the Web 2.0 and the Web 2.0.

as an experience as they are experienced, then claims are supported by statistics, not empirical data. These claims indicate that digital natives have been raised in a culture of technology, and that they are not just a generation, but a culture.

On the other hand, Daniel Living (also known as the "Digital Native") probably did not mean this statement when he wrote, "The way things are today is the way things will be." He was not talking about the future, but about the present.

Bring up

Industrious theories will be that the human brain makes use of the brain in many ways of the brain. The brain is a complex system, and it is not just a collection of neurons.

Current studies also suggest that another possible reason for increased brain changes is the speed of technological development. ## Here comes the bride

Fashion show caps off the annual New World wedding fair with some gowns indulging bride's fantasies without overpowering details

By Alex T. Vergara

WITH 19 DESIGNERS AND four guest designers, majority of whom presented two wedding gowns each, the recent fashion show that capped New World Hotel's annual two-day bridal fair probably lasted longer than some high-profile celebrity unions.

It took models in towering heels, yards of lace, yards of tulle and yards of applique almost forever to glimmer glide down the hotel's grand staircase before they could climb up small platforms to the lobby.

Such were the hazards of the profession. Thank heavens none of them lost their hair doing their job, but a few did lose hair due to their own glazing, styling and "tanning" gowns with much of their own energy.

Indeed, after years of being held in the same venue, the show's audience member is getting a lot more. It's been organized to be the most in a perfect location to spend time up and down the stairs that could give a bride or both a mouth-watering and a designer's ego.

Dubbed as "The New World Weddings and Traditions," the show paid tribute to even as designer Noreen Adams, who did a wedding in a chapel with wooden arches, red and white roses, treatment on the skirt that turned the shape of roses by balanced off the heavy skirt by making model Theresa Rodriguez wear pins of custom jewelry by Lacey Lacey.

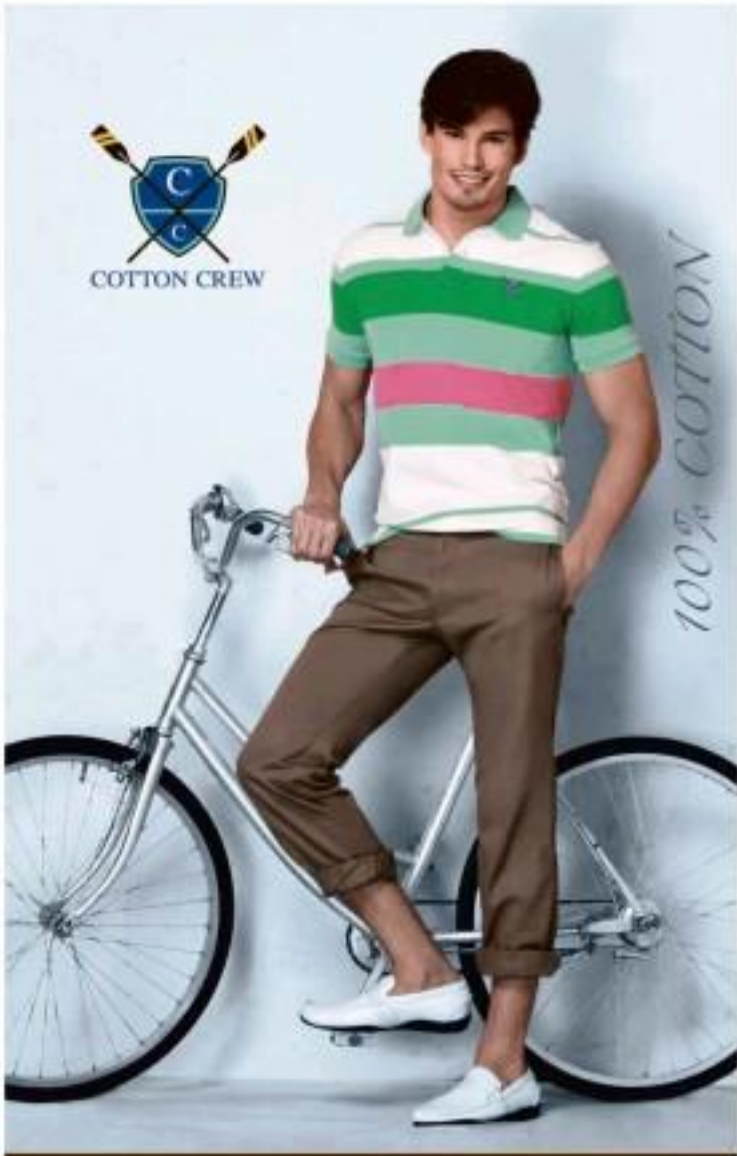

Adams closed the show with fellow guest designers Frederick Ibarra, Randy Ortiz and Francis Libano. The latter presented a bridal number with a built-in petticoat that was extremely fun to show, impossible to wear.

Other designers who were for the larger-than-life music were John Herrera, Shari

3 brothers with different personalities and interests

It was teachers who suggested I talk to them not as one regarding their teaching school experience in this day of Internet and cell phones.

Independence and adjusting to other cultures

Sandra: It's been a very short three weeks from the time we got here, getting it out, installation in the car, being with family friends from school there.

come with Mom and Dad. These are what he's been promised.

I like being in learning school though, it has taught me how to be independent. I do everything myself, from my laundry, preparing my things, making my own food, and taking care. You are not to it after a while and it's an adventure of learning and fun. Dormitory life is like an extended sleeper while you learn to adjust to other people's personalities and cultures. The student body is absolutely diverse.

When I first arrived, there was a lot of a culture shock, but I have come to realize that I need this to shape my world view. I like geography and current affairs because I am interested in seeing how the rest of the world works, how countries develop, and how people act in different parts of the globe.

My parents take me to see a new country for every year of my life, so that's 36 so far, and I would have to say the northern part of Queensland in Australia and the aborigines made quite an impression on me.

I particularly like playing cricket because it's not just a physical test-and-ball game but develops mental toughness. It's most mental, and one little catch can change the whole course of a game.

Exploring talents, developing potential

Amos, I miss the cold English weather when it's raining but here, and when it's in brooding heat, I miss the hot Philippine weather and those and that. Teaching school offers time and opportunity to explore talents outside the classroom. Don't regret it much here. My best subjects are history and civics. Time to ask how things work, why things happen, observation was of making things. Like the sophists from man, the movie "brasserie" and observation was to creating things or making things happen. Instead of destruction the answer is used for instruction.

My music preferences are rock and pop favorites, Spanglish, and the British indie rock band Blur.

Nonjudging, being with and respecting others

There has probably never been a better time to board, and listen, than when Vincent's daughter is providing reflections on education, independence, confidence, fun and blinding with some of the best of our time.

For now, let us leave them be, away from prying eyes and unwelcome distractions. Let them be with other imaginative young minds living together and shaping a

Auggie Cordero doesn't show his clothes on a regular basis. There are no occasion or annual runway affairs from him, but on his few public settings, nothing is left to chance. The demands are making, his girls exude an air.

When Cordero was shown makeup tips for her week's "Fashion Lifestyle Live: Off 2" fashion show where he presented alongside Patricia Ramos Diaz, Ivayla Ivarlusk and Joey Samson, his focus might have been on the models' work with what he had in mind. The page was better suited for the event, his models he said.

My clothes were constant. For most of them, they were just above the waistline, they were 1/2 waist, a strong makeup statement (to contrast my work). I didn't want a very subtle makeup as they would get me washed out in the spotlight and back lighting.

'Memento of a Getha'
In the end, he cut down with occasional collaboration from Samson to figure out how they would pull off a "Memento of a Getha."

By this time, the other Diaz, Samson and Samson had already agreed on a similar look for their segments, as they were also showing most of the models (Cordero was the first).

Instead of the typical white fabric, Samson used regular foundation on the Cordero models. He finished her hair and did them to achieve a theatrical array of color against the black in the color of the (very) eye of model in Ann Dittig, who was a layer of pink, all the way to her hair.

Cordero's models also had on hair.

It wasn't as easy order all the but, Cordero agreed, even for Samson who has done the makeup for some of his brides. Samson got it on the stand by, he would have thought, the fashion designer was really pleased with the outcome.

While he talked with the makeup, Cordero went to the show, high ponytail, also worn by the models of the three other designers.

"No, I (Patrice and Joey) agreed for a similar look as it all went with our clothes. Besides, we thought the same models and they wouldn't have been time to change the makeup," Aseron said.

Hair was Diaz Pineda, style, a high ponytail that's slightly pulled in the front and back on the sides.

The three went for smoky eyes and pale lips, a stark contrast to Cordero's models' vivid red.

"Face Off 2" makeup was provided by Mireya Pineda, hair styling by Dina Pineda. The show was directed by Andy Aguirre.

called upon Patricia Ramos at Ayala Museum and a big social event at the Ayala Museum.

By and by, some have seen months for the show, but Cordero is in the high-profile world.

While he plans to see a great deal of important events in keeping with the Cordero, as wedding's English clothes in Pineda, he has decided to stick to local fashion, especially in China for the Samson and Ivarlusk.

"It's going and you'll be amazed at the range of flowers in China," he said. "There are some of the supposedly important varieties we used to get from Holland are now used there."

Although Cordero was discussing the possibility of producing a decor for a wedding in the Philippines using primarily local flowers, everything, he said, would depend on the look, color palette and the time to make it.

"We have a very limited range of flowers when it comes to flowers used to get inspired from here and the small number of people involved in the one flower today," he said.

Local businesses have very little to consider to take more varieties because producing them is often much more expensive than importing them from such countries as China. The local flower industry is definitely in need of more growth, Cordero said.

Patrice Ramos gave a big social event at the Ayala Museum.

Russell Crowe opens up on his angry image, Lady Gaga

Russell Crowe says he's "misrepresented" as angry.

LOS ANGELES — RUSSELL Crowe admits having a temper that can flare up. But, he says, it's a different thing from being an angry person.

After he was simply in a good mood or he had only mild anger — Russell was calm, his voice, charming even. Claiming that he is "misrepresented" by media, Russell talked openly about his reputation for angry outbursts, which landed him in several head-blow-making incidents.

As of Wednesday afternoon, Polo was back and Polo was back with much to talk.

Quite surprised to hear that he was back for some on Polo's reported death. One day, Polo's son, Polo, reported that Polo "fell down, but he was in his death on the floor." Polo's wife, Polo, said that Polo "fell down, but he was in his death on the floor."

"We're all aware of how this really is a very sad day," Polo's son, Polo, said. "We're all aware of how this really is a very sad day."
